Western Offensive Threatens To Engulf Entire German Front

10-MILE RHINE FRONT To 6 Enemy Divisions Are Trapped As 1st and 3rd Armies Join

(By International News Service)

Allied armies slashed at the linking heart of Germany from east and west today, while U. S. 1st Army troops, their movements veiled by a security blackout, advanced from their bridgehead on the Rhine's east bank at Remagen.

American assault troops sweeping forward the interior of the Reich shed sharply with German tank and infantry units striving desperately to contain the mounting breakthrough south of Cologne. Front dispatches from International News Service.

UP-TO-PRESS-TIME WAR BULLETINS (By International News Service)

U. S. 3RD ARMY ONLY 1 1/2 MILES FROM COBLENZ

Paris.—U. S. Third Army forces were reported only one and one-half miles from the German city of Coblenz today as the American First Army bridgehead on the east side of the Rhine was further reinforced with troops and supplies.

Sharp clashes resulted when the Germans, employing tanks and infantry, sought to contain the rapidly expanding U. S. bridgehead but the Americans continued to swell across the water barrier to press forward into the interior of the Reich.

First and Third Army forces slashed at remnants of five to six surprised German divisions trapped west of the Rhine along with elements of four other divisions.

Allied forces at the northern end of the blazing Western Front in embittered fighting have shrunk the German bridgehead west of the Rhine opposite Wesel to five miles in length and four miles in depth.

The Germans persistently sent over artillery fire from the eastern bank of the Rhine against the Allied northern armies but British and Dominion forces of the Canadian First Army maintained steady gains.

The German town of Erfel, on the east bank of the Rhine, was captured by the American First Army before the forces of Gen. Hodge proceeded inland. Security measures imposed by headquarters prevented detailed information on the progress of the bridgehead forces.

Illustrating the enormity of the German debacle, it was calculated at headquarters that more than 100,000 Germans have been taken prisoner on the Western Front since the drive on the Rhineland began Feb. 23. This figure is double the average prisoner rate tallied by the Allies since D-Day. Large numbers of others are expected to be put on the captured list soon.

Won't You Help To Make Life Easier For Prisoner of War?

It is believed there are at least twelve American prisoners of war from this section. Some have been prisoners more than a year, others less. Assuming the average is one year, the total for the twelve amounts to 624 weeks—years of slow starvation and death. If it were not for one thing—the Prisoner of War Package.

The entire cost of packing, shipping and distribution is borne by the Red Cross. The Government, lend-lease, army and navy bear the other expenses. The contents of each box cost $3.50, wholesale. 14,000 packages are being put up daily at the Philadelphia centre by volunteer workers.

That is where some of your Red Cross money goes. The regular package will be on display in McCrory's window until March 15th and the following week at Thomas Rozakis' window, 1618 Farragut avenue.

SERVICEMEN TELL OF RED CROSS ACTIVITY

Pvt. Harry Wilson and 1st Lt. Geo. R. Brown High In Praise

VISIT WAR PLANTS

The story of Red Cross and its work among the well, as well as among the wounded service men is being told in this area by two servicemen, perfectly competent to speak. They are carrying the Red Cross story into the industries where they are addressing groups of war workers. It is a story coming from the lips of men who speak from experience—the experience of hardship and the experience of salient fighting.

High praise for the work of the Red Cross was given at plants 1 and 2 of Fleetwings, Division of Kaiser Cargo, Inc., by these two local servicemen. They are: Pvt. Harry Wilson, of Lincoln avenue, who with a "buddy" huddled in a slit trench filled with water for two weeks while the "Jerries" held them "pinned down;" and 1st Lt. George R. Brown, of Garfield street, who has had a wide experience abroad during this war.

The two servicemen spoke at plant one on Thursday and at plant two yesterday. They were accompanied by Hugh B. Eastburn, chairman of the current Red Cross drive here, himself a veteran of World War I, and who was abroad with them.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

We Are Going In

Washington, March 10.—IT HAS been proven many times in both national and international politics that prophecy is a risky and foolish business—at least for responsible persons. Our top generals and admirals who told us the war would be over a year ago know that now "I've done with that crystal ball stuff," said Admiral Halsey the other day in Washington when asked about his 1943 prediction. It is to be hoped so.

OF COURSE, the larger the territory taken in, the more dangerous the forecast. Conceding all this, it still seems safe to assert, with almost no qualification, that a few months from now a new League of Nations will spring into being and, with overwhelming Senate and public support, the United States will take its place as a full-fledged member. It is true that 27 years ago, at the close of the Versailles peace conference, similar predictions about the Senate and the country were made concerning our participation in the original League. They turned out to be so tragicly wrong that it might well deter a cautious man from venturing a flat forecast this time.

HOWEVER, the conditions are so different as to make extreme caution in this respect seem unnecessary. There is, first, the great basic fact that a second world war incomparably more dreadful in every way than the first world war has tremendously deepened the desire and determination of people everywhere, and of all classes, that there never shall be another. It is far clearer than before that civilization would wholly crumble under a third such conflict. While it is true the first League did not prevent the present war, it was doomed to fulfillment from the start by the absence of the two most potentially powerful nations of the world—Russia and ourselves. Without these two, there was nothing to rely upon to save the old balance of power grouping, which failed this time, as it had always failed before.

THE RESULT has been a complete collapse of all confidence in the ability of any such arrangements to discourage aggression and keep the peace. Inevitably then, the world has turned again toward the league idea, for the simple reason that neither before nor since the last war, has there been advanced anywhere by anybody any other feasible, or even plausible, suggestion.

VANDENBERG'S OPPORTUNITY

Part Four

At the moment it seems a bit unfashionable for anyone to express the idea that there may be anything fundamentally wrong in the peace-plan agreements reached by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

This is rather surprising, because the President himself claimed no more than that the Big Three had made "a good start on the road to a world of peace," and said, for example, of the much disputed Polish decision, "I didn't agree with all of it by any means."

Moreover, the tenor of his remarks about the San Francisco conference next month appears to be that the delegates will have wide latitude in modifying details of the existing plan, and in suggesting amendments and alternatives—in other words, that they have the opportunity of making improvements and hence the duty of seeking out weaknesses.

There are certain phases of the Yalta agreement, as it is currently understood, that would appear to need correction if the international organization is to be permanent and if the Wilsonian objective is to be reached:

"Only a peace between equals can last; only a peace the very principle of which is equality and a common participation in a common benefit."

The principal question is the position of Russia.

The two stormy petrels of the peace discussions to date—the attitude of France and the treatment of Poland—are merely symptoms of two larger issues: first, is Russia fully committed to the international organization, and second, does Stalin wield top-heavy and oppressive influence in the discussions.

There certainly is little question that Stalin won hands down in the Polish question. Churchill and Roosevelt accepted Russia's idea of the proper Eastern boundary—the Curzon line. The Russian puppet government at Moscow has claimed, apparently accurately, that it will dominate the temporary Polish government, while the exiles in London, formerly recognized by both England and the United States, now are out in the cold.

Meanwhile, Russian dominance in the Baltic and Balkan States appears to be developing unchecked. Close censorship over domestic affairs in these countries is an ominous sign. One needs the outlook of an ostrich not to admit that, in certain ways, Russia is getting away with the creation of a huge "sphere of influence" which will dominate Europe approximately as far west as central Germany.

The Russian position is still more vexing in the case of France.

General de Gaulle has been posturing upon the international stage in a fashion which must greatly perplex those who did not take in the full implications of his announcement, just before the Big Three conference, that France had signed a separate treaty with Russia.

De Gaulle has, in fact, adopted an attitude unfortunately similar to that which Hitler used in the mid-thirties. He preaches constantly the "rights" and the glory of France, and is making extremely serious plans, quite in line with Hitler's, to build France's future by force of military strength.

He refused to go to visit with President Roosevelt, he has declined to commit himself on the Yalta program to the extent of becoming one of the Big Five inviting nations, and he announced publicly and with emphasis that

AGRICULTURE FACING ITS GREATEST YEAR

L. Graham Campbell Addresses Members of the Bristol Exchange Club

WILL FEED THE WORLD

One of the outstanding authorities on agricultural problems in New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania, L. Graham Campbell, was the guest speaker before members of the Exchange Club at the Elks' Home Thursday evening when he spoke on the subject, "New Developments in Agriculture."

"Today American agriculture is being challenged as it has never been in the history of our country," Campbell declared. "We are being looked upon as the 'Bread Basket' of the world, and with our modern machinery and scientific knowledge of fertilizing and controlling insects and diseases, I believe we are approaching the greatest year in the agricultural history of our country," was Campbell's prediction.

Campbell, who spent six years in research agricultural work at Rutgers University and three years developing agricultural projects in Nova Scotia, outlined the historical background of agriculture in this country.

A Courier reader writes "you're truly" as follows:

"While riding home from work each day, we view with pleasure one of the Bristol Township school bus drivers who, when he stops his vehicle to discharge small pupils, always leaves the bus. He then personally 'bags' all traffic either way when necessary, and sees that the children cross the road in safety before proceeding to the next stop.

"We have noted this daily and we believe that much credit should be given to this gentleman for his care and thoughtfulness in the safety of the children."

Report Hirohito's Palace Ablaze

London.—The Imperial Palace of Japanese Emperor Hirohito was set ablaze by the large-scale American Superfortress raid on Tokyo last night and early today, radio Tokyo said, according to Reuters.

Tokyo claimed, however, that the flames said to have been set by incendiaries were quelled.

There was no official substantiation in American quarters that the Imperial Palace grounds had been affected in the latest Superfortress raid. Pilots returning from the 300-plane mission over Tokyo, a record assault by the massive B-29's, said, however, that the Jap capital was turned into a "sea of flames."

Drop 107 Tons of Bombs on Mindanao

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Luzon.—Launching heavy air attacks against Mindanao, second largest island in the Philippine group, bombers of every category today dropped 107 tons of bombs on enemy personnel areas, supply dumps and installations as Yank infantrymen continued their relentless drive against Jap defenders on Luzon.

Elements of the First Cavalry and Sixth Divisions on Luzon were steadily increasing pressure on the Antipolo-Wawa line while launching ahead for substantial gains east of Iloilo.

A communique disclosed that literally thousands of Japs have been buried alive in caves in an area some fourteen miles east of Manila by Yank troops who have been fighting a "necessarily slow" campaign to root the Japs from their deep holes and warrens. To date, 446 of these underground strongpoints have been blown up and 137 captured in the past 48 hours.

MacArthur revealed the loss suffered by the enemy in this "digging out process" to be several thousand while our casualties were practically non-existent. It was also revealed that launching sites for eight-inch rockets being used by the enemy were also captured in the area.

Coincident with the heavy aerial attack on Mindanao, Mitchell bombers blasted airfields and installations at Sanga Sanga in the Tawi Tawi islands which stretch between Borneo and Mindanao.

THE SHOOTING STAR

The Army now has a jet-propelled combat plane, the P-80. Believed to be "the fastest fighter in the skies," according to an announcement approved by the War Department, it has been appropriately named the Shooting Star. It is further described as a craft of "outstanding" range as well as extreme speed and maneuverability.

Details of the design and construction of the new ship are meager. It has been revealed that it has a wing utilizing aerodynamic innovations which permit the plane to approach the speed of sound. Its ceiling is "well above that of propeller-driven planes." That is equivalent to saying that it can fly well above 500 miles an hour and operate at altitudes greater than 40,000 feet.

It is also revealed that it has a pressurized cabin, equipped for the "G" suits pilots must wear to protect them against "blackout" when performing strenuous maneuvers. The engine, reported to produce more than twice the power of earlier jet power plants, reduces the weight to the point where the Shooting Star can carry heavy loads of ammunition, photographic equipment, bombs and fuel.

All of which sounds most impressive. It seems safe to conclude that the Army has just about obtained what it was looking for. And it is gratifying to learn that volume production of the plane has been given "top priority." Still, it is only being realistic to note that American engineers were far behind the Germans and the British in this field—and would be still farther behind if the job of building and flying the ship, which normally takes a year and a half, had not been done in 143 days.

FLYING FIELD IMPROVEMENT

It is becoming difficult to scan a newspaper without encountering a news item concerning an innovation in flying. Among such items is one that engineers are working on plans to warm runways at airports. Heavy snows in the eastern part of the United States this winter have created a sizeable problem for airports.

It is estimated that the cost of snow removal at a big airport may total $200,000 a year. Engineers estimate that at a cost of $3,000,000 a heating system can be constructed under the runways which would keep them free of snow. Pipe lines spaced approximately a yard apart and formed into grids of approximately 1,000 foot circuits would be placed under the runways.

Steam from the airport's boiler house would be fed into a small underground heat exchanger in each circuit for conversion into hot water to be circulated by pump. With the temperature of the runway raised to 40 or 45 degrees, the heaviest snowfall would melt quickly.

History is being made so rapidly now that historians have replaced shorthand and rapid calculation with snap judgment.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

"I'll bring Drue here; I'll get rid of the trooper on guard—I don't know how. But I'll get her..." "No," he said again and firmly. "You'll bring Alexia here. Now. If you please, Miss Keate."

"Alexia!"
The queer look of speculation was in Craig's face again. He said quite coolly, looking remarkably like his father in his more unpleasant moments, "Because I'm going to ask her to marry me."

"Marry Alexia? But, good heavens..." I broke off. "If you think you'll keep her from giving them the hypodermic that way..." "Please go, Miss Keate."

"But I..."
He lifted himself on his elbow and snapped like a drill sergeant, "Do as I tell you! Bring her here!" Alexia was in her room and I watched her select a diaphanous cream lace garment that set my teeth on edge and not because it courted pneumonia and every possible rheumatic ailment.

The trooper down at the end of the hall saw us leaving her room and even at that distance I could see him snap to enrap attention when his gaze fell upon Alexia. We reached Craig's room and she swept straight to the bed as Craig said, "Alexia, did you give the police the hypodermic?"

"Why I..." She settled down on the bed, sitting very close to him. "Yes, I did, Craig," she said softly. She shot a glance toward me. "I thought I ought to. It was my duty. I gave it to Nugent tonight. He's taking it to be fingerprinted. And to have the sediment inside the barrel tested for digitalis."

"Yes," said Craig slowly. "I suppose you had to. Well, you've done it now. Alexia, there's something I want to ask you."

"Yes, dear."

"Will you marry me?"

I shut my teeth so hard that I bit my tongue and uttered a stifled ejaculation. Alexia didn't hear it; she was leaning over Craig as if she couldn't believe her ears. "Why, Craig?" she cried.

"Will you?" he demanded, his eyes holding her own intently.

"Why, I—oh, Craig darling," she hesitated. Then she seemed to get a kind of hold on herself and leaned over nearer him, lace and chiffon and all. "Oh, my darling," she breathed. "At last..."

He pushed her away, rather abruptly. "No! I hoped she'd fall off the bed, but she didn't. He said, 'I don't mean just sometime in the future. I mean now. Right away. Tomorrow.'"

"But your father—Conrad—what will people say?"

"It doesn't matter. They'll not know. I can fix everything. Will you, Alexia?"

Which was just exactly more than I could bear. I whirled out of the door and gave it such a hard bang behind me that the trooper away down at the end of the hall jumped in the air, and came down facing my way and running, re-

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Literally, there is no alternative. Either there must again be organized a new league to which we adhere, or we must again assume the narrow nationalistic attitude which utterly failed to keep us out of the last war, utterly failed to keep us out of this war, and almost indisputably, would fail to keep us out of the next. Actually, there is no choice. It is either a new—and, this time, a far more effective league or it is an isolationism which has twice proved almost fatal. Conceivably, this new league may not work. In detail, it may not be all we would wish. But there isn't anything else with the slightest hope of success. It is this or nothing.

—O—
UNDER SUCH circumstances, it is incredible that we should hesitate—and there is now every indication that we will not hesitate. Sentiment in this country today is far stronger for postwar co-operation for peace, whether the instrument is called a league of nations or as Mr. Roosevelt called it in his recent speech, the "International Security Organization," than it was 27 years ago. In that day, with a few notable exceptions, the political and personal enemies of President Wilson were violently against the League. Today, the political and personal opponents of President Roosevelt in many cases are stronger than his friends for the promulgation of the Dumbarton Oaks principles by the San Francisco conference and the ratification of the agreements at San Francisco by the Senate. With few exceptions, practically everybody of importance in both parties is in favor. Nearly everybody of importance in the industrial, labor, agricultural and financial worlds is also in favor. Both parties, through their acknowledged leaders, committees and conventions, are on record for it. The Senate opposition in numbers and quality is infinitely more feeble. There are no Lodges, Borahs, Reeds, La Follettes, Norrises, Bronnedeeges, Mosesses and others to combat it. There are few, indeed to follow Senator Wheeler.

—O—
CONSIDERING these things, it seems safe to prophesy that we are going into a league—this time—a real league, with real power and a full membership. It seems safe to predict that this time there will be no repudiation of the American President by a small Senate minority. It seems safe to say that this time we are going to live up to our commitments. This is the real thing—and we are going in. In the interests of clarity, however, this should be said—the new league will not make the peace terms. Those will be made by Britain, Russia and ourselves. The settlement with Germany will be made, as it should be, by the nations which defeated Germany, in consultation with nations legitimately concerned in regional problems. The neutral countries—Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Eire, etc.—will have nothing to do with this settlement. That will be handled by the Big Three. After that, the new league (no matter what the name) can start in an atmosphere of peace.

he does not consider France bound in any way by any of the current agreements.

Meanwhile he plans a huge military base at Dakar—a threat of no uncertain nature to South America—and is busily enlarging his army, with special emphasis on airplanes.

The real question, however, isn't what General de Gaulle says and does, but whether Stalin is backing him up.

None of the Big Three has answered that question. If the answer is not forthcoming before then, it needs to be drawn out at San Francisco.

It is all very well for President Roosevelt to make pleasing generalities like the following:

"The Crimean conference . . . spells the end of the system of unilateral action and exclusive alliances and spheres of influence and balances of power and all the other expedients which have been tried for centuries—and have failed."

So far it hasn't spelled anything of the sort.

De Gaulle says, and Stalin hasn't denied, that there is in effect a special agreement between Russia and France which calls for a program of "unilateral action and exclusive alliance."

On the strength of that pact, de Gaulle is busily throwing monkey-wrenches into the peace plan which Stalin supposedly is interested in establishing.

This just doesn't make sense. Perhaps Senator Vandenberg will be the one at San Francisco to persuade Russia to say which direction she is going.

And Vandenberg also is the one man who may be able to force a reconciliation of the Roosevelt ideal expressed above—an end of "spheres of influence"—with the obvious fact that Russia is busy setting up exactly such a sphere of influence in Eastern Europe.

which has been kidnapped, almost killed during the Normandy invasion and torpedoed at sea. The dog, known as a skeltie, was spirited away on a L. S. T. from his home in a Dover pub in England.
